Coaching Philosophy
I believe in the Dutch philosophy of Total Soccer, meaning that with coaching leadership the player/student learns the skills necessary to impact play at any position at any time. Players on the team learn to think about the total process of a situation not having a strict positional rigid structure, but moving fluidly as needed and as the game dictates. Focus on individual and team skills as player development dictates. Oh, and I love to have fun playing soccer. So I coach mostly with games or interactive skill drills where players generally never stand or sit but have constant movement. Ideally playing at a high level of ball possession and player movement on the field.
